

I just received this message from the Indiana Attorney General: "The Consumer Bankers Association (CBA) has chosen to challenge Indiana's Telephone Privacy law in a proceeding before the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). The CBA is attempting to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana consumers. If successful, anybody that you currently have a business relationship with (e.g., your bank, credit card company, long distance carrier) will be able to call you as often as they want." -- I do not want the FCC to allow this or any other group permission to do so. I want my privacy. It's not just one phone call where you tell them "no thanks" and to stop calling, but usually it is a couple attempts a night by their computer dialer that hangs up on you if you don't answer quick enough, then when someone is on the line, they play dumb and say it wasn't them that called every night the past week. Then they say they'll take you off their list, but a second and third person from the same place call, claiming they didn't know I had already been contacted, etc. See how annoying it is? Please stop this effort byt the CBA and others. I want my privacy.
